

FORMER WESTERLY MAN FOR BISHOP

Rev. Samuel G. Babcock Favored For Suffragan of Massachusetts Diocese—Track Walker Struck by Freight and Instantly Killed—Miss Ellen Maine Dead at Laurel Glen—Funeral of Mrs. George H. Stevens.

Senator Wilbour of Little Compton is reported for the committee on incorporation of the Rhode Island legislature, with recommendation of its passage, the act which provides for the charter of the Norwich and Westerly Traction company. The report went to the calendar and the favorable action will probably be taken during the present week, as there is no opposition. This charter will simply transfer to the Norwich and Westerly company the identical public privileges that were granted the Pawtucket Valley and the Connecticut and Westerly companies, which have been purchased by the Norwich and Westerly company. At a recent meeting the proposed charter was thoroughly explained by President Robert W. Perkins of Norwich and received the unanimous approval of that body.

Incidentally, Mr. Perkins remarked that at an early date it was proposed to improve the trolley service in Westerly by making the general terminal at the new highway station, and he said he was of the opinion that the proposed changes would be for the mutual benefit of the traveling public and the town and the trolley companies. The plan would relieve the congestion in Dixon square, especially in the summer season. Mr. Perkins said the announcement was perhaps premature, as the plans were not completed. Judging from the hints thrown out by some of the councilmen, the plan will have some opposition, but with very little merit when the general progress of the town is considered. The Norwich and Westerly Traction company, which controls all other lines operating in Westerly, had arranged with the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company for terminal facilities, but subsequently it was ascertained that the section designated above the terminal in part had been taken over by the town of Westerly. The town had entered into a deal with the railroad company whereby a strip of land near the town farm was given the company in exchange for a strip ten feet wide in Railroad avenue to permit the widening of that thoroughfare.

Some of the members say that they are opposed to having trolley tracks in front of the new station for aesthetic reasons. Others say that the trolley cars should be compelled to run down Canal street to the steps leading to the station platform and then back up to the main line for through traffic, regardless of the expense, and public inconvenience, and others object to widening Railroad avenue so as to have a driveway on each side of the present trolley tracks, and that have the trolley tracks occupy a part of this addition.

"God have mercy on us if we have to submit to that," declared Albert B. Crafts, formerly of Westerly, before the superior court, over which Judge John W. Sweeney of Westerly was presiding, last week. Mr. Crafts made the statement in his usual dramatic style at a point in a negligence suit when opposing counsel had moved for a direction of a verdict and had claimed that pictures of the location of the accident should be considered as evidence.

Mr. Crafts was contending that pictures could not depict the scene, as the lights and shadows shown in the photographs might have been greatly different than the lights and shadows which were cast at the time of the accident. "Do counsel for the other side want your honor to show competence by deciding how those lights and shadows fall?" shouted Mr. Crafts with characteristic eloquence.

The case was brought by Eugene Henry against the Providence Gas Burner company. The plaintiff claimed that he was injured as a result of Angelo Emilio, track walker in the employ of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company, was struck by a freight train while riding his track bicycle not far from Kingston station on Saturday.

An extra freight train bound east was run onto a siding to let a regular train pass and this train was backing down the siding when it struck Emilio. He evidently did not realize that the train was approaching, and did not pay any heed to the shouts of the flagman, but became confused and was struck by the train. He was twenty-two years of age and leaves a wife and child.
